

Awakening to a New Consciousness: Extractivism

Session Three

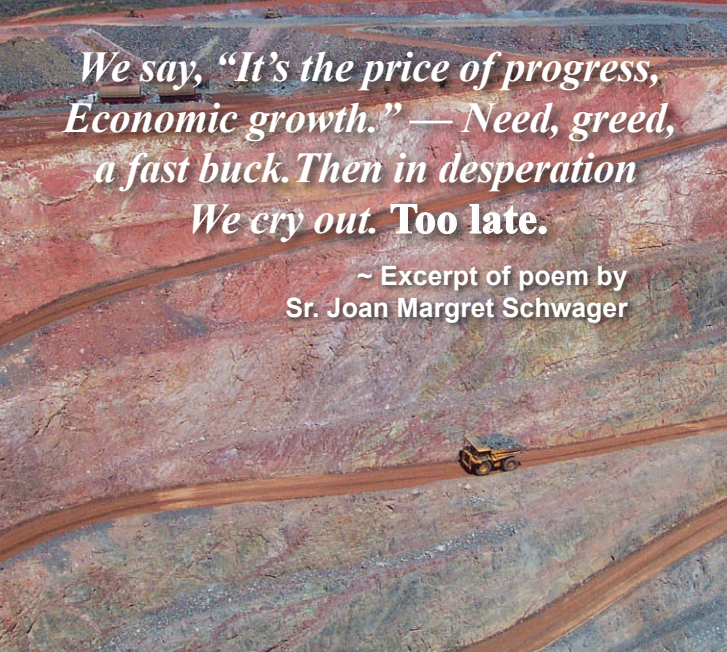

By committing ourselves to a decentered way of listening, seeing, and making decisions, we engage in decolonized analyses of our own structures and practices.

~ from the Mercy lens

We say, "It's the price of progress, Economic growth." — Need, greed, a fast buck. Then in desperation We cry out. Too late.

~ Excerpt of poem by
Sr. Joan Margret Schwager

In order to respond to the cries of Earth and the poor... politics, economics, social, cultural, and religious formations all need to shift away from structures of exploitation.

~ from the ecological theology of liberation lens

We seek to understand and alleviate the suffering of Earth, of animals, of humans, not believing that one suffering is superior or inferior to the other.

~ from the eco-feminist lens

We must address the ethical and spiritual roots of the problem. Technological solutions are not sufficient.

~ from the integral ecology lens